Don't let tax time be taxing

Heath Hamacher
Leader Staff

The holiday season is over and now tax time is here.

'Tis not the season, however, for Soldiers to ruin regulation cuts by pulling their hair out. Volunteers at the Fort Jackson Tax Center stand ready to help make the filing of state and federal taxes free and easy for service members, retirees and family members.

The Tax Center, which will be located in building 2441 near the corner of Supply Road and Essayons Way, will open for business Jan. 23 and remain open through April 15, the deadline for filing taxes. Initially, hours of operation will be from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m., though that will be subject to change.

"Obviously, we're going to try and accommodate everybody we can at the beginning, but the hours may change in the middle of the tax season and pick back up to the original hours at the end," said Capt. Ryan Dodd, legal assistance attorney and Tax Center officer in charge.

Dodd said appointments are not necessary, but are preferred to better serve customers. Walk-ins will be served on a first-come, first-serve basis. Dodd said he does not expect a "1040EZ Drop Off" to be utilized this year, so everyone filing at the Tax Center will have to sit down face-to-face with a volunteer.

The Tax Center is supervised by the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate and operates in conjunction with the Internal Revenue Services Volunteer Income Tax Assistance Program. Volunteers helping prepare taxes are trained and certified by the IRS.

"The ITAP served more than 2,000 Fort Jackson customers during last year's program with an estimated savings of nearly $199,000.00 in tax preparation and electronic filing fees," Dodd said. "Most of those who benefited from the ITAP were enlisted Soldiers,

No furloughs needed for now, Gates says

American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — The $70 billion in emergency funds approved Dec. 18 by Congress has sidestepped the need for the Army to send out furlough notices for now, but that money won't last long, the Pentagon's top official said recently. "Absent timely congressional action in the new year, we will again face the risk of running out of money," Defense Secretary Robert M. Gates.

"The department welcomes this step, however it is important to note that it represents only a partial solution," he said.

Gates said officials are still analyzing the bill, but overall the Department of Defense received less than half of the president's $189.3 billion request.

Above the $55.7 billion needed to continue fighting, the emergency appropriation will provide money for military pay and benefits, replacing and repairing combat equipment, and funds for Iraqi and Afghan security forces, according to DoD officials.

It will not, however, provide money needed to pay U.S. troops for the full year, and operating funds will run out again in the spring, officials said.

Gates said that funding the department in "fits and starts" effects planning and puts procurement and training for deploying troops at risk.

"I only hope that next year (2008) we can all come together and move quickly to provide the remaining funds to troops," Gates said.

On a more personal note, Gates acknowledged that the last-minute action to approve funding caused stress among the Defense Department work force.

"I realize and regret that in the last few weeks we have created anxiety and uncertainty for (the civilian work force). I hope we don't have to face a replay of this situation again this spring. But they can rest assured this department treasures them and will not take any action affecting them unless it absolutely must," Gates said.

CDC; PCS deferment; impaired-on-duty; framing

Q I heard a rumor that the Child Development Center is going to start opening on Saturdays. Is this true?

A Child and Youth Services already provides Saturday child care for mission requirements through the Child Development Home. However, depending on demand, additional facilities may open for Saturday care in 2008. CYS will survey the Fort Jackson community in January to determine the need for Saturday programs. In the meantime, if you currently need Saturday care, please call 751-4869.

Col. Dixon

Q I am to have a permanent change of station to Fort Riley, Kan., within two weeks, but I have a family emergency concerning my spouse. Is it too late to submit a deferment and what are the procedures?

A No, it is not too late to submit a deferment. In accordance with AR 600-8-11, paragraph 2-13b, request will be submitted as soon as possible upon determining that a deferment is needed, or within 30 days of receiving a reassignment notification.

Requests submitted after 30 days because of unforeseen circumstances will not be rejected, however, they must include an explanation of the circumstances causing the late submission.

Submit the request through your chain of command to the Personnel Strength Management Work Center. The request will be forwarded to Human Resources Command for final approval.

Q What is considered impaired on-duty?

A Blood Alcohol Content, based on breath test, of .05 percent is considered impaired on-duty. The test must be confirmed by a military police breathalyzer or a legal blood test.

Q Are framing classes offered on Fort Jackson?

A Yes, Framing Classes are conducted the second Saturday of each month at the Frame Shop located in the MG Robert B. Solomon Center.

The class costs $30 and is limited to the first five patrons registered.

Civilian says Warrior Transition Brigade worth emulating

William H. Craig
Army News Service

FORT WORTH, Texas — Recently I was given the opportunity to spend a week with the Warrior Transition Brigade at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington, to view firsthand how the Army had improved the transition process for outpatient Soldiers and to see if the Army's way might have application in the civilian health care world.

From a professional standpoint, I was most impressed with the Army's organizational and leadership efforts through the Warrior Transition Brigade.

I include in the term leadership all levels I observed during my weeklong visit, to include squad leaders, case managers, physicians, platoon sergeants, staff officers, noncommissioned and commanding officers and commanders.

The Warrior Transition Brigade and Walter Reed work closely together in a coordinated manner that at times seems almost "unmilitary."

By that, I mean the leadership of both organizations is aware our wounded Soldiers are recovering from various types of injuries, both physical and mental, and they may not be able to interact with them in the normal "Army way."

It's impressive to see an organization like the Army, which I have always perceived to be very command and control oriented in leadership style, actually be adaptive in its leadership style and incorporate a flexible approach based on the needs of this wounded Soldier population.

Unity of command — an important military principle — between the Warrior Transition Brigade and Walter Reed is achieved through Lt. Gen. Eric Schoomaker and his deputy, Brig. Gen. Mike Tucker.

My observation is they both provide an effective leadership framework to ensure the coordinated effort of both the brigade and the hospital care system.

I was very impressed with the Warrior Transition Brigade commander, Col. Terry McKenrick, and Walter Reed's Col. Pat Horoho.

I observed them to be skillful leaders with keen instincts about what is needed to ensure accomplishment of this important mission.

I was interested in the activities of the Warrior Transition Brigade and their focus on outpatient case management.

While my experience in the health care industry has shown we do a good job of case managing on the inpatient side, it seems to me our systems for outpatient case management are not as well developed as the Army's.

When assessing the needs of their wounded Soldier population, the Army developed a concept I believe compliments the medical resources of an organization like Walter Reed and effectively meets the Soldier's outpatient case management needs.

This is referred to as the "Triad of Care" and incorporates three disciplines critical to managing the outpatient process once the Soldier is discharged from inpatient status.

The first piece of the triad is the squad leader. The second piece of the triad is the case manager. The primary care manager is the third piece of the triad.

My week at Walter Reed with the Warrior Transition Brigade proved a point I have experienced many times in my career: if you give an organization the right level of resources combined with the right people to lead and execute, it can accomplish many great things.

As a citizen, I also don't want to neglect mentioning how inspired I was by being around our young men and women who serve our country.

While bringing attention to issues that need correcting is worthy, we as a nation and specifically our media should seek out the good and the inspiring stories that abound at Walter Reed and other military installations throughout the United States.

Don't reduce our Soldiers to just newspaper stories, talk show topics, or an issue for the presidential candidates to debate. Look for yourself at the Warrior Transition Units around the country and the leadership success they exemplify.

Spend time with our wounded Soldiers and hear their stories.

Take time to experience what I was able to experience by being around Soldiers and it will not only make you a better citizen but a better person.

Federal law restricts federal employees', Soldiers' acceptable political involvement

Chris Rasmussen
Leader Staff

With the election year here, there are many questions concerning Army policies restricting a candidate's use of facilities for political events and political activity by Soldiers and Department of Defense civilians.

Political candidates are prohibited from using military installations for political assemblies, meetings, fund-raising events, press conferences or any other activity that could be construed as political in nature. The guidelines are set forth in Army Regulation 360-1.

"Once a candidate declares, registers, etc., that portion of the guidance applies," according Ed Spells, chief of Policy and Doctrine, Army Public Affairs Center.

Members of Congress, whether or not candidates for election, may visit Army installations to receive briefings, attend official events and receive tours.

Candidates who are not members of Congress may be given the same access to installations as any other visitor. Prior to visiting an installation, all political candidates must be informed that all political activity and media events are prohibited.

Candidates are not permitted to film or tape campaign commercials in front of military equipment or Army installations and facilities. Army support, including troops, bands and color guard, to political meetings, ceremonies or similar events is also not allowed.

In addition to restrictions on what candidates can and cannot do, Soldiers and federal employees are also limited in political participation.

"The political campaign season is upon us, with caucuses and primaries busting out all over," said Col. Donald Curry, U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command staff judge advocate. "As Soldiers and federal employees, our activities in this regard are governed by federal law, Department of Defense directives and Army regulation."

While serving on active duty or working as a federal employee, certain political activities and types of speech are prohibited.

Service members and civilian employees, according to Curry, must refrain from participating in any activity while in uniform, or while wearing any official insignia, which may be prejudicial to the performance of military duties or is likely to bring discredit.

"Active duty service members and federal civilian employees are encouraged to get involved in political activities and fulfill their obligations as United States citizens," he said. "However, certain political activities that create a real or apparent conflict of interest with their federal employment are expressly prohibited."

Service members may participate in local nonpartisan political activities as long as they are not in uniform and the activity does not require government property or resources, interfere with duty or imply government involvement.

Soldiers on active duty and Army civilians are prohibited from engaging in the following political activities:

Using one's official authority to influence or interfere with an election, soliciting votes for a particular candidate or issue, and soliciting political contributions from others.

Running for the nomination, or as a candidate for election, to a partisan political office or holding such political office to include state or local civil office.

Participating in partisan political management, campaigns and conventions or making speeches before a partisan political gathering, including any gathering that promotes a partisan political party, candidate or cause.

Attending partisan events as an official representative of the Armed Forces or serving in any official capacity as a sponsor of a partisan political club.

Displaying large political signs, banners or posters on private vehicles.

Promoting political dinners or fundraising events, distributing partisan political literature, or conducting a political opinion survey under the auspices of a political partisan group.

Participating in any radio, television or other program or group discussion as an advocate for or against a partisan political party, candidate or cause.

Soliciting or otherwise engaging in fundraising activities in federal offices or facilities for a partisan political cause or candidate to include selling tickets for political dinners and similar fundraising events.

Making a contribution to, or receiving a contribution from, another member of the Armed Forces or a federal civilian employee for the purpose of promoting a political objective or cause, including a political campaign, giving speeches, writing articles or providing public comments which contain political material in one's capacity as a service representative.

School-choice offers parents alternatives in education

Mike A. Glasch
Leader Staff

While students are just getting back into the swing of being in the classroom after the holiday break, it is time for parents to make some decisions about which school their children should attend for the 2008-2009 school year.

Richland School District 1 (RSD1) and Richland School District 2 (RSD2) are taking applications for their school choice (expanded choice, magnet and Montessori) programs.

Each district has different requirements and deadlines, with some applications due Saturday.

According to Ruth Russell, Fort Jackson's school liaison officer, in RSD1 parents can apply to put their child in a school other than the one they are zoned for if there are child-care issues or some type of extreme hardship.

"Sometimes we'll have Soldiers who want their children to go to the schools that the on-post child care will transport to even though that's not their zoned school," she said. "That's important, because in all these programs, unless the Soldier's child is attending the school he or she is zoned for it is the parents' responsibility to provide transportation."

That application process begins April 15 and runs through the end of the school year, but a parent can apply anytime of the year for hardship reasons.

In RSD2, there are no restrictions for applying for the expanded choice programs.

For both districts, the Montessori programs are offered at the elementary school level and the expanded choice and magnet programs are offered at the elementary, middle and high school levels.

One of the major differences between the two districts is that the application for the programs in RSD1 are made through the student registrar, while the application for RSD2 programs is made online through the district's Web site.

RSD2 started taking applications for its programs Tuesday and will continue to until 5 p.m., Feb. 8. However, Soldiers who move to Fort Jackson have 30 days from their arrival to apply for expanded choice up until the first day of school. Approval is given on a space available basis.

Russell is quick to point out that the school choice programs are not school vouchers that other states have implemented.

"Parents can't enroll their children in just any school," she said. "They have to remain within the school district."

The only exception to that rule is for the Richland Middle College program for 11th and 12th graders. It is run by RSD1, but is open to all students regardless of which school district they live in.

Russell said children who live on post are fortunate in the choices they have.

"We are lucky because the children who live on Fort Jackson are zoned for the district (RSD2) that has the most magnet programs," she said.

There are 22 magnet programs offered in RSD2 through the three levels of schools. The district has a goal of adding four new magnet programs each year. Some of the magnet programs include The Academy of

Exercise Physiology and Sports Medicine, Convergence Media and The Center for Inquiry.

Joseph Eberlin, the Director of magnet programs for Richland Northeast High School said he thinks the greatest benefit of the programs is that the students are more motivated and eager to be challenged to really think and go beyond the text.

"It's all about showing our students how thoughts translate to a real-world environment," he said. "We'll take a field trip to Lowe's Motor Speedway to see how physics actually dictates the construction of a track, what it means for a car to hit speeds of 180 mph and see what happens when a car hits those speeds. We're taking the classroom and turning it into an interesting place."

Russell believes students who take advantage of these programs benefit now and in the future.

"The more choices the better," she said. "I think the students are able to get the jump on their peers when it comes to college because they are going to get ahead in that area they are focused in."

For more information on school choice programs and requirements go to the RSD1 Web site www.richlandone.org, the RSD2 Web site www.richland2.org or call Russell at 751-6150. Also, parents can visit the different schools to find out more information. For a schedule with dates and times of RSD2 program briefings offered, see page 15.

Customer Service Corner

Some issues resolved, more needed for AFAP Conference

Christina Garza
Community FIRST Coordinator

Two Army Family Action Plan issues — one for the Defense Commissary Agency and one for the Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation — have recently been completed.

The issues were submitted as part of the Community FIRST/Army Family Action Plan, which is an ongoing process that allows Fort Jackson members to submit issues, which cannot be fixed by the Interactive Customer Evaluation system.

The first issue, from the Surviving Spouses Focus Group, was that the commissary does not allow patrons to take the motorized carts outside the commissary. Those using the carts may experience difficulties returning to their vehicle because of limited mobility.

The focus group recommended allowing baggers to return carts to the commissary for them once they have made it to their vehicle, but to do this two baggers would have to be assigned to patrons using the carts.

The group also recommended the commissary buy all-terrain tires for the motorized carts so the road does not tear them up.

DeCA responded that the use of motorized carts outside the commissary would create more resourcing and safety issues. There are wheel chairs available in the front of the store that can be used outside the commissary for patrons with limited mobility to return to their cars.

The second issue, from the Family Member Focus Group, is the lack of services available to children, specifically teenagers, who live off post or the lack of publicity or awareness for those services currently offered.

The focus group recommended increasing the awareness for services currently offered for teenagers of military personnel who live off post.

MWR responded that incoming teens can request a youth sponsor through the MWR Web site even before arriving at Fort Jackson. This process would match the teen with a peer his or her own age who would help familiarize the incoming teen with Fort Jackson and the local community. Incoming families may also request a Welcome Wagon visit for their children up to 18 years old to welcome them to the community.

Once the school year begins, students can take advantage of Student to Student (S2S), a student-led program supported by Fort Jackson’s school liaison officer (SLO), but offered in select schools.

Through this program, students help students transition to their new school and community. Marketing of youth programs will be increased through monthly Leader articles and ads, flyers, the MWR Web page and at the Information Exchange Council meetings. The SLO will also distribute materials through the S2S program at local high schools as well as take information to local middle schools.

Working together, the SLO and the middle school/teen director will identify a student volunteer from each school to post items of interest for military youth on school bulletin boards.

Issues can be submitted through the Customer Management Services Web site or Community FIRST/AFAP ICE link, whether it affects Fort Jackson or the entire Army; feedback is important. In January, issues will be collected for the AFAP Conference scheduled for March.

Help the community by submitting issues and recommendations online at <http://www.jackson.army.mil/WellBeing/wellbeing.htm>.

ICE Appreciation

The garrison would like to congratulate the Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation, specifically the Officers’ Club, and the Installation Housing Office, specifically Family Housing Office. They have achieved a 4.88 and a 4.85 rating, respectively, in employee/staff attitude out of a possible 5.0, for a 12-week period. This is an outstanding performance in customer satisfaction. Keep up the good work.

Couple keep a company apart

Wife goes through Basic Combat Training in husband's battalion

Mike A. Glasch
Leader Staff

When the majority of Basic Combat Training Soldiers enter basic training they know it will be more than two months before they see their families again. However, that is not the case for Spc. Sunny Vitanov, Company F, 1st Battalion, 34th Infantry Regiment. Her husband, Staff Sgt. Ivan Vitanov, is a drill sergeant for Company B in the same battalion.

Ivan has been in the Army for seven years. He and Sunny have been married for one year.

Sunny said that when she made the decision to put on the uniform, she thought she knew what to expect during BCT.

"I knew a lot about the schedule due to him sharing his day with me and me asking questions. I thought I knew what I was getting myself into to some degree just from the stories he would tell me," she said. "He told me from his perspective as a drill sergeant what BCT was like, but when I came here it was totally different. I really felt that he didn't tell me anything. If I had known everything I probably would have more hesitation about what I was going to do."

Once Sunny signed her enlistment papers and received her report date, it became apparent to her and Ivan that she might end up in his battalion.

"Because her report date was along the same time frame we were due to pick up our cycle at the 120th (reception battalion) the thought did cross our minds," Ivan said. "But we weren't sure until the cutoff was actually done. It was still quite a surprise."

Because of their marriage, they had to get approval from the battalion commander. Since Company F is located in a different building than the rest of the battalion, Sunny was allowed to stay instead of being placed in a different battalion.

At first, they tried to conceal their relationship to each other from BCT Soldiers.

"I thought it would be a lot easier on me living in a group environment. I didn't want the gossip to get around," Sunny said. "It took two to three weeks before one of the Soldiers went to sick call and overheard some of the drill sergeants talking about it. She came back and blurted it out to the whole company."

While Sunny was trying to remain anonymous, Ivan's peers knew from day one that his wife was in their midst.

"I've kept tabs on her, but not over excessively," he said. "I'd call some of my battle buddies at her company at the end of the day to see how she was doing, especially during the first three weeks because I knew her maturity level is higher than many of the privates and it would be stressful and difficult for her to adapt. Those were the days I would harass my battle buddies. All privates have a stressful time until they get into the routine."

For now, Staff Sgt. Ivan Vitanov, drill sergeant, Company B, 1st Battalion, 34th Infantry Regiment, can put his wife, Spc. Sunny Vitanov, Co. F, 1st Bn. 34th Inf. Reg., a Basic Combat Training Soldier in the front-leaning rest. The roles will soon be reversed once Sunny completes Officer Candidate School and Ivan will be required to salute her.

Ivan is quick to point out that his position does not mean the other drill sergeants take it easy on Sunny.

"Regardless that she is my wife, the drill sergeants in her company are very professional and there is no doubt in my mind that they are treating her like every other private," he said.

Sunny said at times she feels like the teacher's kid.

"I do get singled out a lot," she said. "The first few weeks of BCT I tried not to bring attention to myself because I didn't want it to look like I was getting special treatment. But as an OCS candidate, the drill sergeants have told me I need to step forward into more of a leadership position."

Which raises an unusual situation in the Army, once Sunny pins on her gold bars, she will be able to turn the tables on Ivan. While he can put her into the front-leaning rest right now, once she graduates from OCS he will be required to salute her.

"We'll deal with that when the time comes, but I think he's going to be jealous," she said. "He's worked hard in his career. I don't feel like I deserve to be saluted by someone who has been established. But that's the way it is."

Ivan said he will take it all in stride.

"The roles will be reversed after she finishes with OCS," he said. "I won't have a problem saluting her, she will have earned it."

History lives in Fort Jackson cemeteries

Chris Rasmussen
Leader Staff

Many at Fort Jackson are aware of the planned National Cemetery, but few know about the multitude of small cemeteries scattered throughout the installation — including one family plot which is still active.

Elizabeth Wilkes Grigge, who retired as the Chief of Patient Administration from Moncrief Army Community Hospital, was buried Dec. 1 on Fort Jackson at a small cemetery across from the Soldier Support Institute's Forward Operating Base at Ewell and Ivy roads.

"We received a request to bury her on Fort Jackson, but we weren't quite sure how to go about that," said Carketa Milke, office manager for Bostick-Tompkins Funeral Home. "Evidently several members of her family are buried out there including her son, father, grandmother and grandfather. Their whole family is there."

Grigge is the first person to be buried on the installation in 14 years, according to Bessie Williams, director of the Fort Jackson Museum. The last person to be buried on post was Grigge's son, Kenneth Wilkes, in 1993.

There are 26 known cemeteries on the installation according to Williams, with some dating back to the early 1800s.

"Before Fort Jackson was built, this land was privately owned," she said. "So there were several homesteads, churches and even a little schoolhouse. There are some headstones that are no longer legible, but we know of one that dates back to the year 1800."

All known cemeteries on post are marked, according to Chan Funk, a Fort Jackson archaeologist.

Cemeteries which have been identified can be viewed on maps kept at the Directorate of Logistics and Engineering as well as Range Control.

During the pre-occupation range briefing, Range Control will brief training area users on specific locations of cemeteries within their area of operations.

"They are off-limits to all training activities and are fenced and maintained so that family members may visit," Funk said.

If training activity or construction projects encounter what may be an unrecognized cemetery, cease all activity and notify Range Control immediately, Chan said.

Although burials on the installation are rare, family members visiting departed loved ones and researching their genealogy are quite common.

"It runs in cycles. We won't have any one for three months and then the next four

The Veal family, whose name changed from Veighl over the years, is one of about a dozen family plots located at Cemetery No. 3 on Fort Jackson. The cemetery is located across from the Soldier Support Institute Forward Operating Base near Ewell and Ivy roads.

months we are inundated with lists of people who want to get permission to go out and see cemeteries," Williams said. "It usually starts when someone dies and the family members find out their great-great grandfather owned land on Fort Jackson and they research it and discover they have relatives buried here."

Fort Jackson was selected for a new national cemetery in 2006. Construction on the 600-acre site, which will be located along Wildcat Road north of North Tower Road, is slated to begin in May with completion by August.

It will accommodate up to 25,000 graves and will be South Carolina's third federal-run cemetery for veterans.

Law gives disabled vets more home grants

Department of Veterans Affairs
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — A change in federal law allows certain seriously injured veterans and service members to receive multiple grants for constructing or modifying their homes, the Department of Veterans Affairs has announced.

Before the change, eligible veterans and service members could receive special adaptive housing grants of $10,000 or $50,000 from VA only once.

Now they may use the benefit up to three times, so long as the total grants stay within specified limits outlined in the law.

“Veterans seriously disabled during their military service have earned this benefit,” said Dr. James B. Peake, Secretary of Veterans Affairs. “This change ensures that every eligible veteran and service member has the opportunity to use the maximum amount afforded to them by our grateful nation.”

To ensure all previous recipients are aware of this opportunity, VA has mailed more than 16,000 letters to eligible veterans, reaching out to those who used only a portion of their grant or who decided not to use the grant even after initially qualifying.

The response in the past year has been dramatic, with more than 4,600 applications received thus far. Of these, approximately 3,900 veterans have been determined eligible under the new law, and more than 200 grants were already awarded.

VA has averaged about 1,000 adaptive housing grant applications annually during the past 10 years. Since the program began in 1948, it has provided more than $650 million in grants to about 34,000 disabled veterans.

To ensure veterans’ and service members’ needs are met and grant money is spent properly, VA works closely throughout the entire process with contractors and architects to design, construct and modify homes that meet the individuals’ housing accessibility needs.

Eligible for the benefit are those with specific service-connected disabilities entitling them to VA compensation for a “permanent and total disability.” They may receive a grant to construct an adapted home or to modify an existing one to meet their special needs.

VA has three types of adapted housing grants available. The Specially Adapted Housing grant, currently limited to $50,000, is generally used to create a wheelchair-accessible home for those who may require such assistance for activities of daily living.

VA’s Home Loan Guaranty program and the Native American Direct Loan program may also be used with the SAH benefit to purchase an adaptive home.

The Special Housing Adaptations grant, currently limited to $10,000, is generally used to assist veterans with mobility throughout their homes due to blindness in both eyes, or the anatomical loss or loss of use of both hands or extremities below the elbow.

A third type established by the new law, the Temporary Residence Adaptation grant, is available to eligible veterans and seriously injured active duty service members who are temporarily living or intend to temporarily live in a home owned by a family member.

While the SAH and SHA grants require ownership and title to a house, in creating TRA Congress recognized the need to allow veterans and active duty members who may not yet own homes to have access to the adaptive housing grant program.

Under TRA, veterans and service members eligible under the SAH program would be permitted to use up to $14,000, and those eligible under the SHA program would be allowed to use up to $2,000 of the maximum grant amounts.

Each grant would count as one of the three grants allowed under the new program.

“The goal of all three grant programs is to provide a barrier-free living environment that offers the country’s most severely injured veterans or service members a level of independent living,” added Peake.

Other VA adaptive housing benefits are currently available through Vocational Rehabilitation and Employment Service’s “Independent Living” program, the Insurance Service’s Veterans Mortgage Life Insurance program, and the Veterans Health Administration’s Home Improvement and Structural Alterations grant.

For more information about grants and other adaptive housing programs, contact a local VA regional office at (800) 827-1000 or local veteran service organization.

Additional program information and grant applications can be found at <http://www.homeloans.va.gov/sah.htm>.

Partnership program paying off for Army, Soldiers

Ed Lane
Army News Service

FORT KNOX, Ky. — The Army’s Partnership for Youth Success program, which began in 2000, has now promised more than 53,000 Soldiers from the Army and Army Reserve a leg up on civilian employment.

Recruits choose to participate in the PaYS program before their military careers even begin. After they meet a recruiter and guidance counselor, they choose from a list of civilian employers who participate in the program.

Under the PaYS program, when Soldiers leave their active duty or Initial Entry Training for the Army Reserve, they will receive a guaranteed job interview with the civilian employer they chose as part of their enrollment in the program.

“The program enables a man or woman to look at options for after-Army employment,” said Robert A. Qualls, PaYS program manager.

Qualls said that the program gives Soldiers who have chosen to re-enter the civilian workforce a leg up on other job seekers, because those job seekers do not have a guaranteed interview.

Currently there are 261 companies participating in the PaYS program, including 39 Fortune 500 companies, three Fortune 1000 companies and four Global 500 companies.

Depending on his or her preferences and qualifications, an Army or Army Reserve applicant can choose from more than 150 specific occupational skills offered by the Army that align with employment opportunities from one of the partners participating in the program.

With the PaYS program, the Army has had to work hard to find civilian employers who need some of the many unique skills that many times are utilized only in the Army. But Qualls said that many times, civilian employers are willing to teach Army employees the skills they will need to work at their company — what they are really looking for, he said, are the qualities that only former Soldiers possess.

“What employers want are Soldier attributes,” Qualls said. “In the medical field they want specific skills, sure, but many companies are simply looking for drug-free employees with good work ethics and good values who believe in not quitting until all the work is done. They are looking for employees who live the seven Army values: loyalty, duty, respect, selfless service, honor, integrity and personal courage. When you talk to employers, they want employees with those values — with Soldier values.”

The PaYS Team wants to ensure that Soldiers who are entitled to a guaranteed interview in accordance with their PaYS option receive that interview. Qualls said that any Soldier who thinks he or she might be a PaYS Soldier is encouraged to call the PaYS Help Desk at (502) 626-1222 to verify his or her enrollment in the program.

World-class boxer trains at Fort

Heath Hamacher
Leader Staff

World-class welterweight boxer Luis Collazo recently spent several weeks in Columbia, much of that time on Fort Jackson preparing for an upcoming bout while getting a taste of life in the Army.

Collazo climbs in the ring Jan. 19 at Madison Square Garden for his first fight since losing a decision to Shane Mosley nearly a year ago and sustaining a thumb injury that required surgery.

Ranked No. 7 in the world by The Ring magazine, Collazo chose Columbia as the site for his training camp because of his affiliation with Andrew Stokes, a former Fort Jackson Soldier turned full-time boxing promoter. Stokes, who retired in 2006, has promoted boxing shows on post and coordinated visits from fighters such as “Tremendous” Travis Simms, Jaidon Codrington and Randy Griffin.

Stokes has known Collazo for years, and hosted Collazo’s training camp. That means he lived with Collazo and his team, cooked, cleaned and oversaw the fighter’s everyday training.

Collazo’s training regimen consisted of pounding miles of Fort Jackson pavement and sparring at the White Rock boxing gym. The trip from New York was a productive one, the Brooklyn, N.Y., native said.

“Actually, this is probably the best training camp I’ve had,” Collazo said. “I’m enjoying myself, but this is more intense than I usually train. It keeps me motivated.”

Both men said Fort Jackson’s facilities are top-notch, but there are plenty of places to train outside the gates. Stokes had another reason for bringing Collazo to Fort Jackson.

“I brought Luis on post to give back to the Soldiers, man,” he said. “I appreciate the 20 years I had in the Army and still feel like a Soldier at times. I can bring world champions here — from Paul Williams (an Aiken native) to Luis Collazo — for meet and greets, and that’s my way of giving back.”

In between workouts, Collazo visited with Basic Combat Training Soldiers, spending two days with the Soldiers of Co. B, 1st Battalion, 34th Infantry Regiment.

He toured the barracks, ate dinner at a post dining facility, spoke to troops and personally autographed pictures for every Soldier in the battalion. He also had those Soldiers sign an Army T-shirt for him.

A highlight for Collazo was firing the M-16 for the first time, though he said his pinpoint accuracy in the ring did not translate to the Basic Marksmanship Range.

“I hit about one target in like, 75,” Collazo joked. “But it was a rush. It was great. It’s something I will never forget.”

The 26-year-old former world champion even ran a physical training test with 1st Bn., 34th Inf. Reg., and the man who can bob, weave, hook and jab for 12 rounds while barely breaking a sweat said he was a little tense beforehand.

“I was more nervous doing the PT test than coming into the ring for a fight,” he said. “It was an incredible experience and, honestly, I was a little intimidated. That is their battleground like (the ring) is mine.”

Pvt. Ikram Mansori, a BCT Soldier with Co. B, has been a fan of Collazo for some time. She said she and her brother enjoyed watching Collazo’s fights, but never imagined she would one day do PT with one of her favorite prizefighters.

“It was amazing. I think everybody did better on that PT test,” she said. “When we were running, during the hardest part, he came back to run with the ones who were starting to give up. It was just amazing.”

Pvt. Blanca Rodriguez, also with Co. B, was thankful for the encouragement to “go harder” and “do more.”

“I thought it was awesome that he cared so much to come out here and spend time with us,” she said.

The interaction was mutually beneficial, according to Collazo.

“It was definitely as motivating for me as it was for them,” he said.

Sgt. 1st Class Santos Soto, a drill sergeant with Co. B, 1st Bn., 34th Inf. Reg., said the timing was great.

“Without a doubt, this was very motivating for our Soldiers, especially right before Christmas exodus,” Soto said. “He talked to them about the importance of what they do. Everyone was motivated from his speech, and a lot of them were just in awe.”

Collazo said it is important to “show our troops that we care and respect them for what they do for our country,” and he plans on honoring service members and remembering his time with the Soldiers on fight night.

Instead of the flashy, sequined robes often donned by big-name boxers, Collazo will enter the ring wearing his gray and black PT shirt, adorned only with the word “Army” and signatures of the Soldiers of the 1st Bn., 34th Inf. Reg. Heath.Hamacher@jackson.army.mil

Collazo moves up

Heath Hamacher
Leader Staff

Luis Collazo is a speedy, slick southpaw who has been in the ring with some of the best fighters on the planet. He is a former world champion who has squared off with the likes of Jose Antonio Rivera, Ricky Hatton and “Sugar” Shane Moseley.

The soft-spoken, Brooklyn, N.Y., native is seen by many as a fighter who ducks no one, but is avoided like the plague; an opportunist who will fight anyone, anywhere, anytime.

As a matter of fact, it was a last-second opportunity that allowed Collazo — currently rated No. 7 in the world by The Ring magazine - to become the World Boxing Association welterweight (147 pounds) champion in 2005. When then-champion Rivera’s opponent pulled out with pneumonia, Collazo gladly stepped in on only three weeks’ notice, winning a 12-round decision.

Collazo’s career started when he was 12 years old at the Starrett City Boxing Club in Brooklyn. He amassed an amateur record of 97-7 and won New York Golden Gloves titles in the novice and open divisions before turning professional in 2000.

Sporting a professional record of 27-3 (13 knockouts), Collazo, 26, has officially fought twice in the Palmetto State, at North Charleston’s The Plex. He fought an exhibition on Fort Jackson in 2001.

Collazo is doing much of his cardiovascular training on Fort Jackson and sparring at the White Rock boxing gym, where owner Billy Stanick is thrilled to have him.

“I am proud to have Luis down at the gym because he is an inspiration to the rest of the young fighters here,” Stanick said. “He’s an exceptionally nice guy and I really like his work ethic.”

A nice guy unless you happen to be standing in the opposite corner, that is.

“I’ve been around other world champions, but I can see how Luis came to be champion of the world,” Stanick said. “There’s no play in him when it comes to training. And when he’s sparring, he turns up the heat as he goes along. I wouldn’t want to be that guy in there with him in the second, third, fourth rounds.”

When boxing pundits talk about the welterweight division, they throw around a lot of names. Mosley. Cotto. Mayweather. Judah. Collazo seems to be an afterthought, but he is ready to serve notice that he plans on being around for a while.

“Cotto has my belt. The one Hatton gave up,” Collazo said. “I’m only 26 years old. I’m getting stronger; I’m developing. I want to capture another world title at welterweight.”

HEALTH

Regular pap tests help detect cervical cancer

Tim Coffey
Moncrief Army Community Hospital

Cervical cancer was once a leading cause of death in women, but the use of Pap smears for screening has resulted in early detection of the disease and, as a result, has significantly improved the survival rate.

More than half of the cervical cancers diagnosed in the U.S. are in women who have never been screened or have not been screened in the last five years.

To help maintain optimal health, the American Cancer Society recommends that all women should begin cervical cancer testing (screening) about three years after they begin having vaginal intercourse, but no later than 21 years of age.

What is a Pap test?

A Pap test is a quick and simple test to check for abnormal changes to cells of the cervix (neck of the uterus/womb). It is not a test for sexually transmitted infections or vaginal infections.

The test should be repeated every year for women up to age 30, and every two to three years for women older than 30 who have had three consecutive negative Pap tests.

Why have a Pap test?

Sometimes the cells of the cervix change from healthy to unhealthy (abnormal). A Pap test can pick up abnormal cells before cancer develops.

When can I stop having Pap tests?

Since the risk of cervical cancer decreases with age, most experts agree that screening can be discontinued by age 65 to 70 in women who have had three negative Pap tests in the past 10 years and who have no additional risk factors, such as a history of cervical cancer, exposure to DES or HPV infection.

What if I’ve had a hysterectomy (removal of uterus)?

Women who have had a hysterectomy do not need Pap tests unless the surgery was done because of cervical cancer, or if the cervix was left in place when the uterus was removed.

For more information, call 751-2501/5035.

Self-refer for mammogram

Tim Coffey
Moncrief Army Community Hospital

To help maintain optimal health, the American Cancer Society recommends all women 40 years of age and older ensure they receive a mammogram once a year. Although mammograms cannot prevent breast cancer, they help medical professionals detect the cancer in its early stages when it is most treatable.

All women should conduct a self breast exam monthly. If any of the following symptoms are present, patients should contact a primary care manager to schedule a clinical breast exam: discharge, drainage, masses, tenderness or soreness.

If nothing is found on a self breast exam, call the Radiology Department at 751-2417/2484/

2248 to self-refer for an annual mammogram or schedule an appointment with a PCM for a clinical breast exam and referral for mammogram.

Patients may only self-refer if all of the following are true:

- 1) Patient is enrolled in Tricare Prime/Plus and her PCM is located at MACH.
- 2) Patient is 40 or older.
- 3) It has been more than one year since the patient’s last mammogram.
- 4) The patient does not have any of the symptoms listed above.

If a patient self-refers for a mammogram, she still needs a clinical breast exam performed by her PCM.

For more information, call 751-2501/5035.

CHAPEL

Old and new

Chaplain (Capt.) Masaki Nakazono
3rd Battalion, 34th Infantry Regiment

Sure, I'll buy new stuff, especially when I think that I'll have fewer problems with something that's new.

New is nice, but I appreciate things that aren't so new, too. For instance, I drive an older car, my kids play an older gaming system and we live in an older house in an older neighborhood.

Older is nice, too.

So, what's so good about new? New means change. And many people really don't like change. People tend to resist change. People are skeptical about change. And, if people accept change, they may do so begrudgingly. Rarely does the idea of change and its occasion bring joy to one's life. Most of us, through our own experiences, have found that change is not necessarily better.

Besides, the old may have more to offer than the new. What's old may be the foundation of who we are and what we have. What's old can provide us with lessons of wisdom, while the new may be untested and unproven. What's old is richly adorned with seasoned greatness and history.

What's new can only hope to become what the old already is.

In the NFL, we have a new generation of great athletes ... Tom Brady, Peyton Manning and LaDainian Tomlinson. One day, I may reminisce and recall with a long-standing awe the triumphs and achievements of these men playing today. But until then, it seems that, at least in my mind, they are overshadowed by the aura of the hallowed veterans of yesteryear. My thoughts and memories still hearken back to the days of Terry Bradshaw, Joe Montana and Walter Payton.

And all this hoopla at the ringing in of the New Year ... are people really enthused about what is "new" in the New Year? I find remarkable pleasure in celebrating the Old Year. I delight in remembering the events which define the year just passed.

Here's my personal year in review.

— Meeting the president of the United States and shaking his hand.

— My team, the Red Sox, winning their second World Series Title in four years.

— Teaching my boys to play trumpet for the first time as they follow in the footsteps of their mom and dad.

— Visiting my hometown in Turlock, Calif., and all my family for the first time since joining the Army.

— Returning safely from my second full tour in Iraq.

Don't be so quick to rush into each New Year that the first decade of this new millennium just becomes a quick blur of an afterthought. Look forward to the end of the upcoming year when you can look back with a sense of great satisfaction and

Cases of the Week

A civilian claims he received $5,950 in counterfeit checks, in the form of five traveler's checks and one insurance check, all of which arrived by mail.

The incident has been reported to the Military Police, and the checks will be sent back to the company in question so that the matter can be further investigated.

A Soldier has reported a missing front license plate on his company's 1-ton truck. In reporting the incident to the MPs, the Soldier said he had allowed another Soldier to use the vehicle for a field-training exercise mission.

The vehicle was returned, minus the front plate, the Soldier said.

A fistfight between two Soldiers has been reported to authorities.

According to Military Police, one Soldier struck the other in the eye and side of the head after words had been exchanged. A commander is aware of the incident.

Tip of the Week

Recently, there have been a number of false police reports filed with the Military Police. People make false reports for a number of reasons including avoiding an embarrassing situation, bringing attention to themselves, seeking revenge or for monetary purposes.

A person initiating a false report can be charged with a crime under the Uniformed Code of Military Justice or federal statute. In addition to the seriousness of charges, false reports create an enormous amount of wasted effort and resources by law enforcement, fire department and emergency medical personnel.

A tremendous amount of needless effort is exerted by emergency services personnel when investigating false reports which divert valuable resources from real issues within the community placing the public at increased risk. When reporting a crime, be factual and truthful.

Understand the basics of life insurance

Capt. Ryan Dodd
Legal Assistance Attorney

Life insurance is the foundation of financial security. It protects financial resources against the uncertainties of life, making it easier to plan for the future.

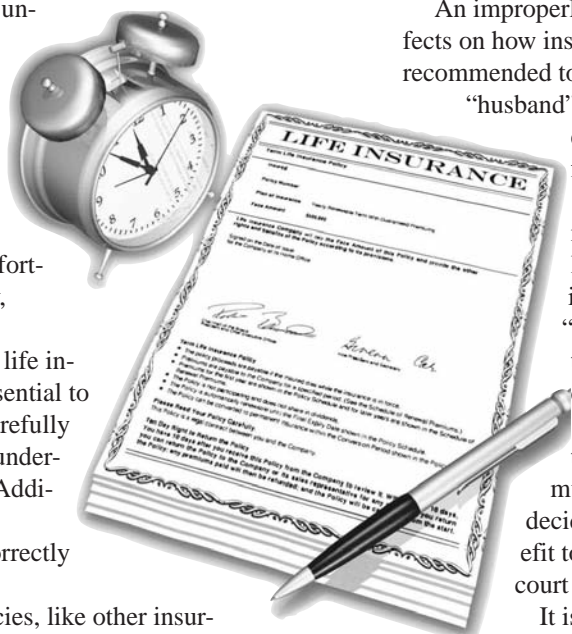

The main reason for life insurance is to provide income replacement to beneficiaries in case of death. The money beneficiaries receive is an important financial resource that can help pay the mortgage, run the household and ensures family members are not burdened with debt.

Choosing a life insurance product is an important decision, but it can be complicated. As with any major purchase or investment, it is important to understand what is needed and the options available.

It is important to fully understand the policy being considered, its terms, limitations and exclusions before accepting any life insurance policy. Additionally, consumers should be comfortable with the company, agent and the product.

When purchasing a life insurance policy, it is essential to read the application carefully and to make sure one understands each question. Additionally, all questions should be answered correctly and fully.

Life insurance policies, like other insurance policies, are legal contracts. Some contracts are easier to read than others, but the policyholder should understand what kind of life insurance he or she owns. Most states require companies to give consumers a buyer's guide to help them understand life insurance terms. Consumers should ask their agent for a copy.

After purchasing an insurance policy, there may be a “free-look” period — usually 10 days after receiving the policy — during which a policyholder can change his or her mind.

During this period, one should read the policy carefully. If the consumer decides he or she does not want the policy, the company will cancel it and provide an appropriate refund.

Life insurance policies require a beneficiary be named. Many people simply name a spouse and children and do not give the process much thought. Choosing a beneficiary and keeping that choice up to date is important. The wording of beneficiary designations is also very important.

An improperly named beneficiary can have drastic effects on how insurance benefits are distributed. It is not recommended to name a spouse simply by designating “husband” or “wife” because this could result in an ex-spouse receiving proceeds intended for others.

Additionally, naming specific children may mean that later-born children will be left out unless the beneficiary designation is changed. It is also advisable to name a “contingent” or secondary beneficiary in the event that a primary beneficiary predeceases the policyholder.

To dispute a life insurance beneficiary, the insurance company of the challenge must be notified. While the dispute is being decided, the insurance company pays the benefit to a trust held by a state court, and that court decides the legitimacy of any challenge.

It is generally not advisable to name minor children as beneficiaries, but rather to name a guardian for minor children and a trustee for insurance proceeds and other assets to be managed until they reach the age of majority. Likewise, if a child named as beneficiary predeceases the policyholder and he or she would want the proceeds to go to the deceased child's children, this must be stated specifically.

Several steps are necessary to replace an existing policy. An existing policy should never be canceled before receiving the new, replacing contract. The first step is to demand a completed “Basic Disclosure Statement Regarding Replacement of Contracts of Life Insurance” for each of the policies considered for replacement.

If someone recommends the replacement because the consumer's needs have changed, he or she should first consult with the insurance company which issued the existing policy to see whether the existing contract could be amended to suit the current situation. Finally, an independent life-insurance or financial-planning professional should be consulted to get a second opinion.

It is important to review life insurance policies and beneficiary designations on a regular basis. Any decision affecting life insurance benefits can have a profound financial and emotional impact on family, friends and caregivers. Before making any major changes regarding a life insurance policy, it is recommended to talk to someone whose advice and expertise can be trusted — a lawyer, a family member or a good friend.

If you have any questions regarding life insurance or would like to have your policy reviewed by an attorney, call the Legal Assistance Office at 751-4287 to set up an appointment.
